Spring Break Out Ride 1 P.M. Sunday, April 11

Meet at Washington Grade School, adjacent to Washington Park. Follow signs to the park, northeast of the square, on Lincoln St. This ride will be approximately 20 miles with a stop in a nearby town.

Washington Rides

Starting April 6 some people will be meeting at 6:00 P.M. in the parking lot of Russell's in Washington for evening rides on Tues. and Thurs. We hope to have riders of all abilities but everyone should be prepared for their own minor breakdown, there is no leader.

Tour Your Neighborhood '99

4 P.M. to 1 A.M., Friday, April 9. A self guided tour of some of Peoria's finest eateries and watering holes. The participating establishments have agreed to offer a special for riders participating in this event and secure bicycle parking while inside. $15 before March 29. Sign up at The Bicycle Bus, 676-4678.

Pancake Rides

Yes, we're still riding (and eating). IVW weekend rides continue on Saturday and/or Sunday morning. We've been meeting at 9 A.M. somewhere within a 20 minute drive of Peoria and riding 30-40 miles. Generally we eat at the turn-around stop. The clothing for cold weather rides takes some experimentation. I'd be glad to offer you some suggestions. Feel free to give us a ring — Eric Hutchison, 685-3921; Don Eberlee, 699-2790.

Washington, DC — A new study suggests where you live could influence your risk of being killed by an aggressive driver. The livability of a community may play a key role in its aggressive driving death rate, according to a report released today by the Surface Transportation Policy Project (STPP) and presented to Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater at a White House event on traffic and road safety. The study suggests that the risk of dying in an aggressive driving crash is highest in places with few travel choices and uncontrolled sprawl, where the car is the only way to get things done. Places with lower aggressive driving death rates tend to be older, more walkable communities with more developed train and bus systems.
